OUR TRADE WITH JAPAN .- The treaty between Japan and the United States, which, after a lapse of three or four years, has lately been ratified and is now in effect, the New York Post says, is practically the only treaty with that empire that is of any value to the United States. Heretofore our trade with Japan has consisted in the purchase of tea, silk, oil, rice, porcelain, and fancy goods, for which every dollar had to be paid in gold and silver of a certain weight and fineness, which reduced the value of the American. Mexican. and Spanish dollar to eighty or eighty-five cents in the currency of that country. The *itzebu, a Japanese silver coin of the value of thirty-four cents, the finest of any known gilver currency, was the standard for all foreign coin. The itzebu is 991.1000ths fine, or 91.1000ths finer than the Spanish pillar dollar and silver: the Mexican dollar is a fraction finer than either, or 901.1000ths. The currency question for a long time caused The currency question for a long time caused much difficulty between the Japanese and foreigners till an understanding was arrived at, the basis of which was that Japanese gold and silver coin should be given for American gold and silver coin, weight for weight, deducting per cent from the latter for loss in recoinage; Spanish and Mexican doubloons and silver dollars were included. The duty on all kinds of imported goods, however, was so enormous that it amounted to a prohibition almost as

It has always been the policy of the Japanese government, like most governments in the East, to encourage industry among their own people, whether mechanics, artisans, laborers, or agriculturists; the fostering care of despetism—of wresting power from the hands fore to be expected that the ruling classes would oppose the opening of their ports for the introduction of goods in competition with the native manufacturing classes. Now, however, the great reduction of duties-from forty to five per cent-provided by the new treaty will stimulate trade between the two coun tive goods, and we shall not be obliged to pay gold and silver at a loss, or adopt the alreative of paying 40 or 50 per cent tax on

At the breaking-out of the rebellion our opening of the ports (July 4, 1869) had nearly which arrived at Kanagawa from June 30. 1859, to July 1, 1864:

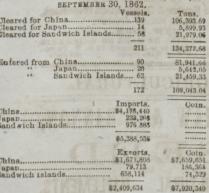

In addition to these, only four United States war vessels, with an aggregate tonnage of 5,739, entered that port during a period of two years, while at no time since the opening of he port have the English had less than four and sometimes as many as eight to ten menof-war at Kanagawa and Yeddo, cruising about and looking after British interests. The whole number of arrivals at the port of Kanagawa in 1860 was one hundred and three. amounting to 40 905 tons, of which fifty-two were British ships of 27,724 tons, which was greater than the aggregate of American, utch, French, and all other shipping. The total amount of import and export duties and other shipping dues paid by American, Dutch, and French vessels to the Japan ese government during the year 1860 amounted to $120,000. The dues paid by British vessels alone during the same time amounted to $150,000. The total amount of the declared value of imports in British vessels during the same year was $665,000, more than ole that of all others, which amounted to

The fact may not be generally known that the choicest qualities of teas now imported comes from Japan. This has only been the case since the Chinese process of "firing" was introduced, some three years ago. This process the Japanese objected to, believing that it injured the flavor. The finest quality of raw injured the flavor. The finest quality of raw silk is produced in considerable quantities in annihilated, the laws enforced, and the Constithe vicinity of Osaca. In 1859, at the opening of the ports, the prices of silk ranged as follows: No. 1, $300 per picul (133 pounds); than two years, No. 1 sold readily for $550, and this was chiefly bought for the French market: the other qualities increased in the same pro-

MISSOURI ITEMS.-The St. Joseph News give the following account of the arrest of the robber of the United States Express. It says:

Haggerty, the Express robber, was arrested at Lawrence, Kansas, Friday, by the City Marshal of that place, who telegraphed the fact to the Express Company here, when Messrs. Crandell and Davenport left immediately for Lawrence after him, and returned with him yesterday morning. He had $750 on his person when arrested, $500 of which he says belonged to the Company. He piloted his guard a short distance above town last evening, where the remainder of the money and drafts, all but $1,600 of the former, were buried. The missing $1,600, he says, went to his accomplice, a furloughed soldier belonging to an lowa regiment, who was arrested this morning, and is now undergoing an examination before the Provost Marshal. The hole in which the money and drafts were concelled, was dug Sunday before the robbery was comers were wounded. One of the Many Cases of Deafness Cured by Dr. Jones Since he Came to Louisville.

I have been deaf in one ear seven years, and was getting so in the other. I was troubled with very unpleasant noise in my head. Hearing of Dr. Jones's great skill, at the Louisville Hotel, I consulted him. In a tew minutes he examined my ears, and told me he could cure me; after I learned his fee, I told him I wanted him to do what fe could for me. I have been under his treatment two weeks, and consider myself cured, and can safely recommend the afflicted to Dr. Jones.

assed. Nobody is quite fool enough to deny it Not so; on the contrary, the whole civilized world "is quite fool enough to deny it," as witness this passage from the work of our own great publicist Wheaton: "But by the modern sage of nations, which has now acquired the orce of law, temples of religion, public edifices devoted to civil purposes only, monuments of art, and repositories of science, are xempted from the general operations of war. Private property on land is also exempt from onfiscation, with the exception of such as may become booty in special cases, when taken from enemies in the field or in besieged towns, and of military contributions levied upon the inhabitants of the hostile territory. This exemption extends even to the case of an absolute and unqualified conquest of the enemy's country." And our own country, as a member of Christendom, has retofore observed this usage, bringing the sage indeed to cover the very point in hand, asmuch as the Government in 1820, speakng through John Quincey Adams as Secretary of State, declared in so many words that among the acts of legitimate war," because "as relates to the owners it is a destruction of private property nowhere warranted by the sages of war," adding that "the right of utting to death all prisoners in cold blood and without a special cause might as well be pretended to be a law of war, or the right use poisoned weapons, or to assassinate." The new organ is ignorant of the law of naions as expounded by our own publicists and enforced by our own country.

The organ says, in derision of the cry in favor of the constitution as it is: But where do we find written in the con tution as it is anything that gives us a astitutional right to pu l up a gun and shoot man or a thousand men, or to take them as risoners, or to enter on lands, or to take supbe done, however, as all agree, except some copperheads; and yet it is not written in the itution as it is. Not so; on the contrary, it is all written in the constitution as it is, which ordains that the Congress shall have power to declare war, grant letters of marque and reprisal, and make to raise and support armies; to provide and maintain a navy; to make rules for the govrnment and regulation of the land and naval forces; and to provide for calling forth the nilitia to execute the laws of the Union, suppress insurrections, and repel invasions. Our thers did not frame a system of government under which war with its legitimate acts is unlawful. Nor do their sons live under such a government. The new organ is ignorant of the constitution of the country.

Finally, the organ says, undertaking to define the aim of the abolitionists as contradistinguished from that of the Conservative Unionists:

We mean to have the constitution as it is, with all its old amendments, and such other amendments as from time to time the people choose to make in the way provided for within the constitution itself.

Not so; on the contrary, you mean to have, f you can get it, the constitution as it is, with his addition or subtraction: "Whatever the President deems indispenable shall be lawful." Such is the constitution you obey and defend in the teeth of the constitution as it is; and such is the constitution you will establish upon the ruins of the constitution as it is, if you succeed in accomplishing your aim. That is Richmond Enquirer has a new alarm about to say, you will establish the discretion of a General Grant, and fears that he will sudmilitary dictator as the supreme law. SPECULATION IN FOOD .- A correspondent of he Lexington Unionist, quotes entire a recent article of ours upon this subject, and up, of taking into consideration the vast material resources of which we dispose, the community of feelings which binds all classes from the humblest to the loftiest, and the spirit of self-sacrifice which breathes through the country and animates the masses. A little examination of our condition cannot fail to lead you to the conclusion that adversity has no other effect upon us than to draw closer the ties which unite us, and to make resistance In addition, allow me to repeat: "Whoever goes to market knows the effects of combination among those who sell the products of the soil," &c. The buyers are as much to blame as the sellers. Why! because they can if they will break up such combinations. How! do with less; and above all, let all interested, as "buyers" in the market-house, go to work and stop the hucksters. They are as completely organized as the army. Every road that leads from this city is "picketed" by them, and persons who would supply us, about as usual, are "halted" and bought out; and the hucksters make us pay what they please. If perchance any of the country peoble get "within the lines" with their stuff, &c., they are attacked by the commanding Generals of the army of hucksters, and generally surrender. Now sir, there is a standing city law against forestalling the market, why in the name of common sense do not the orities enforce the law. Now for in stance, I saw a countryman come in this (Tuesday morning, April 19th, 1864), with some hundred dozen of eggs, opened his boxes, &c., and commenced selling to all who applied, a dozen to this one, two dozen to that one, and so on; when up steps one of the huckster tribe (I'll give his name if re-quired) and took the whole lot. This thing has become so glaring that it should be stop ped. And if the powers that be desire to protect our citizens, and this they should do, they would stop it. And if the towns people will imitate the farmers in their living, prices

o cur city. The charter gives the General Council the power to pass ordinances for the punishment of forestalling, regrating, and engrossing, and our market regulations expressly enjoin that no person residing in the city shall personally, or by agent, sell in the market anything not made, raised, or slaughtered by himself, or bought by him out of the city and not on its way to market, under penalty of from five to twenty-five dollars. Now Burrill's Law Dictionary and Glossary describes forestalling as influencing or affecting the market "by buying goods on the way thither with the intent of selling them again at a higher price, or by dissuading others from bringing their goods there, or by persuading them to enhance the price of their goods." Regrating is to buy provisions and sell them again in the same market or within four miles of it, by which the price is enhanced. Engrossing is to buy up an article in large quantities, in order to raise a demand and control prices. Thus it will be seen that the law can have a perfect hold on the very men who do all the mischief and who have kept up high rates for a year or two past. One of these hucksters actually told us some time since that he only by military success, and if it is not subbought up all the turkeys in the market one | jugated our national existence must end. We morning at an average of eighty cents, and ity in scenes remote from the theatre of war, | sold them at prices ranging from one dollar and the requiring of the States whose people and a half to two dollars. It may be argued that these places are public conveniences, but that is a fallacy; they are the private conveniences of the owners to make money, and they would not care for the public if number one did not experience the benefits of the traffic. They are not satisfied with moderate profits, but their demands are extortionate, and therefore instead of being conveniences they are quite the reverse in a pecuniary point of view, though we grant that they are beneficial after market hours, when confined to their legitimate business. All their operations, however, as far as they affect the public, are under the perfect control of the Councils, and if immediate attention is given to the subject incalculable advantages will result from it. Should the city legislators feel disinclined to move in the mat ter, the people can measurably secure a remedy by determining not to buy from any but regular traders, and to discountenance all who go beyond their legitimate business to influence the prices of articles of daily necessity. Something must be done, and speedily, or we shall be left as bare by these market speculators as a field of grain after a visitation of the army worm, or an orchard after a flight

Mr. Lincoln decrees universal emancipation in the revolting States, and requires those States to ratify his decree in their organic laws before he will admit them to their nstitutional relations in the Union, calling plies or other property from them, or in any way to deprive them of life, liberty, or property except by due process of law? It must the constitution, the preservation of the constitution through the preservation of the nation. "It is by giving fair names to foul actions," says Arthur de Vere to the Troubadour in Anne of Geierstein, "that those who would start at real vice are led to practise its lessons, under the disguise of virtue." It can hardly be said, however, that Mr. Lincoln, whatever his intention may have been, gives to his foul action so much as a fair name, seeing that the action, as he himself represents it, is inspired by the flagitious sentiment that the end justifies the means. The action is foul: but, to every right-minded and discerning person, the name he gives it is fouler still. Surely few of those who would start at real vice will be led to practise its lessons under a disguise so thin and base as this.

But now a word as to the dogma of the copperhead faction: that as soon as the rebellion in arms is overcome every rebel State has the right to go straight on with the functions of government, and to send their Sena-tors and Representatives to the United States Congress; just as if they had never been in armed resistance! This is mere babble, and has no meaning which can be carried into and the triumph of our cause. We have now been fighting for the last three years lost hundreds of thousands, the flower of the youth of this country; expended fifteen hundred million dollars; and still the pulse of our country beats as vigorously and as regularly as if half of our best blood had and private fortune disbursed. With the North, on the contrary, every additional year of war tells fearfully upon the finances of the nation, endangers the existence of the gov-without peril for the government, for the finances, or for the final success of our cause, while Mr. Lincoln cannot. These opinions may appear, to say the least of them, singular; but if you look closely to the state of affairs, North and South, and especially to the discontent of a certain portion of the Western States, you will soon see that I do not exag gerate, and that, as I have said, we may stand overthrow of the war party in the North.

The English efficer, who communicated this conversation says he has since been in position to ascertain that these opinions are entertained by a large portion of the upper class of society in the South, and by the heads of the rebel Government, who look upon anarchy and financial ruin in the North as likely to bring the war to a conclusion before the year is over. The arguments of Beauregard are of course all on one side, and there are no circumstances which justify his prejudiced view of the ability of the Government to maintain its financial resources. But if his premises were correct, his conclusions would

It will be profitable in this connection to see what the London Times thinks of our monetary situation. In its issue of April 6th we proach is made to equilibrium between tax tion and expenditure. The Federals are spending nearly three times as much as we spend, and y they are paying in taxes not much above hal pose to raise more than forty-five milliounds, and it is by no means sure that h ease, however, there will be a deficit of some hing like one hundred and fifty millio nat enormous sum will be added to the na-onal debt. * * * *

It was suggested even in Congress that the customs and excise duties should be doubled; these financial reformers should succeed in people, but how they can be deceived on this subject we cannot imagine. Confident as they are, they are also exceedingly acute, especially in money matters, and they must needs understand what it is to spend £200,- 000,000 a year out of £50,000,000. Yet the most observant of them only talk of putting the scoop a little deeper into the pockets of the rich, as if that could bring any material improvement in the case before them. The rest, we supose, rely on the "greatness," the "youth," and the "elasticity" of their country, forgetting that all these possessions are declining in value through the very extravagance now going on. A "young" country means, among other thiags, a country not yet in debt, but in this respect America is now as old as England. Its territories are immense, it is true, and its population may hereafter become fifty millions in stead of thirty, but the prospects of that in crease are greatly damaged by the impending weight of taxation and the possible dearness of land. Nevertheless, the extravagance goes on, and a system of finance utterly vicious goes on too. Not the least stint is put upon outlay; not the least spur is given to taxation. What little money is raised is raised by the very methods we have learnt to condema. If we were involved in such difficulties, we should hold that the only true course was to establish freedom of trade, remove pro-tective imposts, and give ample scope to national enterprise. We should levy a large income tax for the purpose of unfettering industry, and then we should trust to hard work, perseverance, and economy for bringing ourselves right. The Americans take a course exactly opposite. The Federal Secretary only expected from his income tax about £6,000,- 0, and it is still unknown what proportio of this sum was actually obtained. Protective tariffs are regarded as the chief source of revenue, and the only idea of reform seems to consist in making them more protective still.

If they imagine that they can meet these liabilities without difficulty, we think they will find themselves mistaken; but if they should really achieve such a financial miracle, we

No wonder, then, if Mr. Lincoln is in greater fear of a defeat than Mr. Jeff Davis, because, with Mr. Lincoln, a reverse undennines the very foundation of his power, while with us it rather strengthens it. The difference between us and the North is that Mr. Jeff Davis can stand adversity without peril for the government, for the

Also, when I take into consideration the motives I have just mentioned, I do not hesitate in preferring a temporizing to an aggressive policy, and in advising our government to remain strictly on the defensive, trusting to time more than to bayonets for the HISPER FAR ABROAD .- Yesterday, the ay, was something of a novel day. r Seasons, with all of their attendant , seemed to be crowded into the brief marked by twenty-four hours. The ng dawned with a light-falling rain, poets sang of in years gone by, as a April shower. As the day wore on, the ads parted, and for a short time the e forth in bright gladness, and ature was, indeed, sweet, early

But the glow was transient; the athered and darkened, and the wind chilly, mourning like the saddened expiring Autumn. The rain began first striking the earth with a heavy hen, tempering itself to cold mist, it on transformed into snow-flakes, and ew minutes the white driftings blinded ir, and we felt the icy breath of Winter. n sank behind a cloud, and the last f mock winter was felt as deepened the f night. The clouds faded, and the air milder. At midnight the stars shone a cloudless sky, as fair and bright as e'er beautiful a summer night. RRACES NEWS -A very light business Louisville, Ky., April 28, 1894.

I. The practice of selling intoxicating liquors to enlisted men (including non-commissioned officers) has become such a source of annoyance, causing disobedience and demoralization on the part of the soldier, and preventing the proper enforcement of discipline, that the Colenel commanding has deemed it necessaty to issue orders more stringent than any heretofore published. It is therefore ordered that the officers in command of the Provost Guard in this city pay particular attention to hotel bars, coffee-houses, and all places where liquors of any kind are sold or given away to soldiers, and will have arrested and delivered to the Provost Marshal of Louisville they proprietor of any licensed liquor establishment who shall be found selling or giving to seldiers any spirituous liquor, or any other person who shall sell or give liquor of any kind to soldiers, to be punished with the extreme benalty of the law.

II. Hawking, peddling, or giving away liquor of any kind, whether malt or spirituous, to soldiers is forbidden, and all persons engaged in it, at any place within this command, must be arrested and sent (if in the city) with written charges, to the Provost Marshal of the Brigade.
